Kochek: Engineered by Fire Fighters for Fire Fighters

Kochek Company, founded more than 20 years ago in Eastford, CT USA, as a high quality producer of water flow products and fire connections has established itself as a single source supplier for products that move water from pressurized or static water supplies. As a designer and innovator of fire fighting products, Kochek participates in U.S. and international associations to establish standards in performance and design. Kochek recognizes it has a place in the industry that allows it to serve those customers with large quantity requirements while never forgetting that the business survives on those single customers with single and often special needs. Fire fighting and water flow go hand in hand. Kochek has built its' reputation keeping that fact in mind. From new product to repair to design and engineering, Kochek serves the fire and emergency community world wide.

Utilizing one of the most technically advanced manufacturing facilities in the fire equipment "water flow" industry, the Kochek company has brought more product innovation and diversity to threaded adapters, suction hoses, storz connections, water strainers, LDH appliances and other supply and pressure products since the design of the hydraulic aerial ladder. As a family founded and managed company, Kochek recognizes the needs of its customers and its employees are interconnected. Kochek's advanced manufacturing facilities are friendly to the environment as its serves customer, employee and community. Utilizing only high speed robotic CNC manufacturing machine tools, Kochek delivers products to all markets of the world competitively, on time.

Kochek's beginnings and genesis are rooted in both the practical application of its products and an understanding of the requirements set forth by the marketplace. With twenty years of actual fire fighting experience, and a combined fire equipment sales and marketing history over fifty years, Kochek brings a new and sustainable commitment to the fire service and those who work in it. The world changes every day as do the needs of the fire service. Today, fire fighters around the globe are challenged not just by fire, flood and weather, but the constant threat of terrorism. Kochek does and will build products to aid them on a daily basis. Kochek products are engineered by fire fighters for fire fighters.
